Where compassion and expertise come together. Products to support your journey.

Breast cancer is one of the most common cancers in women in the United States and Canada, and up to 40% of women treated for breast cancer may develop lymphedema¹.

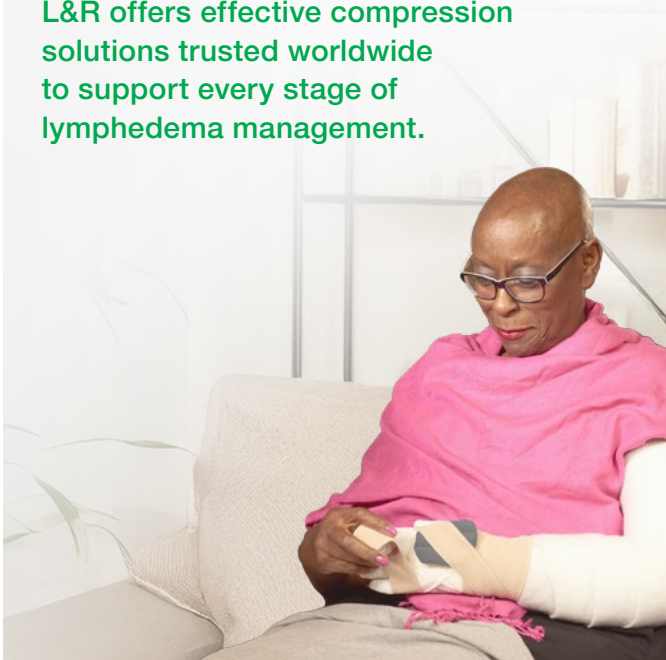

Women treated for breast cancer

Lymphedema can develop immediately after surgery or radiation, but can also occur months or even years later. Early diagnosis and proper management can prevent progression and improve quality of life.

L&R offers comprehensive compression therapy solutions, from compression bandaging supplies for the intensive phase of complete decongestive therapy (CDT), through to self-management at home.

Backed by decades of experience, L&R offers effective compression solutions trusted worldwide to support every stage of lymphedema management.
